Five-story addition to dental school underway

A five-story addition to the School of Dental Medicine, 4559 Scott Ave., at the WU Medical Center, is now under construction, it has been announced by George D. Selfridge, dean of the dental school. The addition, costing $650,000, is expected to be ready for use by Oct. 15, 1985.

According to David A. Bensinger, executive associate dean who is supervising the project, the addition will provide nearly 8,000 square feet of space on the five levels. The construction is taking place in an inner courtyard of the present school building, and also involves the extension of a previously recessed section of the building out to the main building line along Scott Avenue.

The new facility will make possible the transfer of the school's Learning Resources Center, where students use audio-visual equipment to study course materials, to a location adjacent to the school library.

Other changes will include the addition of offices for clinical faculty members, the transfer of the Department of Maxillofacial Prosthetics to more suitable space, the creation of a clinic management office area, two floors of additional space for biomedical research and the creation of a small lecture room that can be divided into two conference rooms.

The Hoffmann Partnership is architect for the addition; construction is by the Tarlton Corp.

The School of Dental Medicine consists of two connecting buildings: the main building, which was constructed in 1928 and totally refurbished in 1972, and the Carlyn H. Wohl Research Center, dedicated in 1961. A four-story addition to the main building was completed in 1975.

Happy anniversary

Social work school celebrates 60 years with 2-day conference

More than 100 alumni and faculty of the George Warren Brown School of Social Work will be featured in lectures, workshops, forums, video presentations and panel discussions during the school's 60th anniversary celebration May 15-16.

The two-day event, which marks 60 years of social work education at WU, will center around a conference on "Excellence and Effectiveness in Social Work Practice."

"The twin ideas of excellence and effectiveness represent the quintessence of the educational mission of the George Warren Brown School of Social Work," said Shanti K. Khinduka, dean of the school. "The conference will bring some of the earliest graduates together with some of the most recent to hear their perspectives on social problems and the strategies to prevent or alleviate them," he said.

The conference will focus on substantive issues surrounding social work education and practice. Topics range from the computer revolution to changes in federal social policies, from the challenges of private practice to a look at death and dying, and from family therapy to health care delivery systems.

Presenters include outstanding social work scholars, educators, practitioners, administrators and consultants of international reputation. They will be coming from 25 states, the District of Columbia and from three countries. More than 200 alumni are expected to return to WU to attend the conference.

Four plenary sessions will feature five of the school's distinguished alumni. On Wednesday, May 15, Scott Briar, dean of the school of social work at the University of Washington, Seattle, will speak on "The Essence of Effectiveness in Social Work Practice."

Leon W. Chestang, dean of the school of social work at Wayne State University, Detroit, will address the conference on Wednesday evening at a banquet at the Holiday Inn in Clayton. His topic will be "Effective Social Work Practice in a Pluralistic Society."

Chancellor William H. Danforth will give the welcoming remarks at the banquet. W.L. Hadley Griffin, chairman of the WU Board of Trustees and chairman of the executive committee, Brown Group Inc.; and James Lee Johnson Jr., a member of the Board of Trustees, chairman of the social work school's Capital Resources Committee and vice president of Stifel, Nicolaus and Co. Inc., also will greet the conference participants during the banquet.

At the Thursday morning session, Janice Wood Wetzel, director of the school of social work at the University of Iowa, Iowa City, will speak on "Issues and Perspectives in Working with Women."

The final session, slated for Thursday afternoon, will focus on

Williams recounts WU's involvement in creation of atomic energy

WU's involvement in the creation of atomic energy and current scientific research on atomic interactions are two topics to be discussed during the 27th Joseph W. Kennedy Memorial Lecture on Thursday, May 2, in 458 Louderman Hall on campus.

Two lectures, which are both free and open to the public, will be given: at 2 p.m., Robert C. Williams, professor of history and dean of University College at WU, will speak on "From the Hill to the Hilltop: Washington University and the Manhattan Project, 1940-1946"; and at 4 p.m., Erwin L. Hahn, professor of physics at the University of California-Berkeley, will discuss "Atomic Memory."

This year, the lectures honor four WU emeriti professors of chemistry who were involved in the Manhattan Project — the construction and testing of the atomic bomb from 1943 to 1945 in Los Alamos, N.M. The emeriti faculty members, Lindsay Helmholtz, David Lipkin, Arthur C. Wahl and Samuel I. Weissman, worked with Joseph Kennedy on the Manhattan Project, and followed him to WU, where he served as chairman of the chemistry department from 1946 to 1956.

"Together, these men brought modern chemical research to Washington University," said Edward S. Macias, professor and chairman of the chemistry department. "This year's Joseph Kennedy lecture honors these faculty who have brought

Robert C. Williams

First lady from Plains: Former first lady Rosalynn Carter delivered the CHIMES lecture Wednesday, April 17, in Graham Chapel. Preceding her speech, Carter met with the St. Louis media in the Whittemore House. During the press conference, Carter answered questions about her years in the White House (1977-1981), the Democratic Party, the Reagan administration and what she, her husband, Jimmy, and daughter, Amy, have been doing since 1981.

strength to the department and the University for the past 40 years."

The title of Williams' lecture refers to the migration of these scientists from Los Alamos — the hill, to WU — known as the hilltop campus. His lecture will focus on the scientists' contribution to the University, as well as the University's contribution to the study of atomic energy. In 1942, the University's cyclotron, which was used for chemical and medical research, produced the plutonium that was studied for its fissionable qualities at Los Alamos.

Williams, an historian of nuclear energy, co-authored with Philip L. Cantelon the official history of the Department of Energy's response to the Three Mile Island nuclear accident, published in 1982 as Crisis Contained, and The American Atom, published last year. Williams is writing a history of the Klaus Fuchs case of atomic espionage.

In his lecture, Hahn will discuss atomic memory — the ability of an atomic system which has changed its order to return to its original state. A member of the National Academy of Science, Hahn has won a number of awards for his work on transient magnetic-resonance phenomena, spin coupling in matter and laser-induced transient phenomena.

Joseph Kennedy discovered the element plutonium in 1941 along with colleagues Arthur Wahl and Nobel Laureate Glen T. Seaborg, past chairman of the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission. During the Manhattan Project, Kennedy served as division leader in the Chemistry and Metallurgy Division from 1943 to 1945, and was awarded the Medal of Merit by President Harry Truman in 1946.

Seniors direct two one-act plays

Tracy Wise has a double major in Spanish and theater. Louisa Foster has a double major in French and theater. Both WU students will utilize their flairs for drama and romance languages when a double-billing of one-act plays, "The Love of Don Perlimplin with Belisa in the Garden" and "The Two Executioners," is presented at 8 p.m. Friday through Sunday, April 26-28, in Mallinckrodt Center's Drama Studio.

The plays are the students' senior theater projects. Wise will direct "The Love of Don Perlimplin . . .," a Spanish play by Federico Garcia Lorca. Her play will be followed by Foster's French play, "The Two Executioners" by Fernando Arrabal.

"Our double majors have really helped us in understanding and directing these plays," Wise said. "Because we each knew the language our play was written in, we better understood the playwrights' intentions. Although they are translated versions, we also tried to give the plays the flavor of the countries in which they were written."

Tickets for the double-billing are $2 and will be available at the door.

Newsletter seeks scholarly papers

SCAN, a new bimonthly newsletter of the Council for Liberal Learning, is looking for papers bearing intellectual news and/or controversy from "all corners of the academic spectrum." The council is affiliated with the Association of American Colleges.

The papers should be 500-1,000 words long and should be understandable by an educated and interested non-specialist.

Interested persons should call Ralph A. Raimi, professor of mathematics at the University of Rochester and editor of SCAN, (716) 275-4429, (716) 275-4332, or (716) 244-9368.

Trustee Barnes given Eliot Society award

Zane E. Barnes, chairman and chief executive officer of Southwestern Bell Corp., received WU's prestigious William Greenleaf Eliot Society's "Search" Award Saturday, April 20, during a dinner at the University's new Sports and Recreation Complex.

Barnes has been a member of the University's Board of Trustees since 1975 and has been a key fund-raiser for the University and its School of Medicine. He is co-chairman of the medical school's Clinical Sciences Research Building Committee, and chairman of the Annual Programs Executive Committee of the ALLIANCE FOR WASHINGTON UNIVERSITY, a program to raise $300 million in gift support.

The Eliot Society, named after the University's founder, is an organization of University alumni and friends. The award is given annually by the society to honor an individual who has enriched the University by his or her interest or support. Last year's award recipient was George H. Capps, president of Capitol Coal & Coke Co. and Volkswagen Mid-American Inc. and chairman of the ALLIANCE FOR WASHINGTON UNIVERSITY.

William M. Van Cleve, president of the Eliot Society, presented Barnes with a silver and marble replica of the sculpture, "The Search," designed by Heikki Seppa, professor of art at WU.

Barnes, who was selected to receive the award by an anonymous committee of the Eliot Society, is a member of the executive and development committees of the University's Board of Trustees, as well as chairman of the board's finance and planning committee for the schools of medicine and dental medicine.

A native of Marietta, Ohio, Barnes came to St. Louis in 1973 as president and chief operating officer of Southwestern Bell. Since then he has received many honors for his contributions to the community. He was the Globe-Democrat Man of the Year for 1981, the St. Louis Variety Club's Man of the Year in 1985, and recently won the Levee Stone Award of Downtown St. Louis Inc. for his part in the redevelopment of the downtown area.

He is a director of Barnes Hospital, a sponsoring institution of the WU Medical Center; a member of the executive committee of Civic Progress Inc.; and active in local, regional and national councils of the Boy Scouts of America.

Carlin presents all-Beethoven recital

Seth Carlin, associate professor of music, will give an all-Beethoven recital at 8 p.m. Friday, May 3, in Edison Theatre.

Carlin's program will feature the performance of the last three Beethoven sonatas, which were last heard publicly as a set in St. Louis when Russian pianist Vladimir Ashkenazy played them here 10 years ago.

Carlin, who began performing publicly at the age of nine, has given concerts around the world. His most recent foreign appearance was in Nanjing, China, where he was invited last December to perform, give master classes and appear on Chinese television.

As pianist-in-residence at WU, he is a frequent performer in the St. Louis area as well. He played a well-received concert on the fortepiano, an 18th-century instrument, in Steinberg Hall last November.

Carlin holds degrees from Harvard University, the Juilliard School of Music and the Ecole Normale de Musique de Paris. He is the winner of many prizes and awards, including the International Busoni Competition.

Tickets are $8 general admission; $5 for WU faculty, staff and area students; and $4 for WU students. For more information, call the Edison Theatre box office at 889-6543.

David L. Browman, professor of anthropology, will attend the 50th anniversary meetings of the Society for American Archaeology, May 1-5 in Denver. Browman will present a paper, titled "Economic Models in the Pre-Incaic Andean State," and chair a session on Andean studies. One of his students, George Knight, will present a paper in the general session on philosophy and archaeological theory. Browman has received a National Science Foundation grant for "Ancient Road Networks on the Northern Mesoamerican Frontier: A Study of Demography, Trade and Political Integration." Research associate Charles Trombold will undertake the bulk of the fieldwork for this project.

Gaye Kinnett, women's basketball coach, was selected to serve as a court coach for the National Sports Festival VI/National team trials for the North region. The trials were held April 18-21 at St. Louis Community College at Florissant Valley. As a court coach, Kinnett's main duties were to supervise and conduct the on-court portion of the trials. More than 150 players participated in the trials. They will be competing for position on teams to represent the United States in three international competitions — the R. William Jones Cup, June 15-28 at Taipei, Japan; the National Sports Festival, July 21-Aug. 1 at Baton Rouge, La.; and the World University Games, Aug. 24-Sept. 4 in Kobe, Japan.

Tri Van Nguyen, a senior biology major, is the recipient of the Marian Smith Spector Prize in Biology for 1985. In addition to an outstanding academic record, Nguyen produced a research paper, titled "A Comparative Study of U3 snRNAs In Cultured HeLa, Hepatoma and L Cells." The research on which his paper was based was conducted under the supervision of David Schlessinger, a professor of microbiology and immunology at the medical school. Nguyen recently was elected to Phi Beta Kappa. He will graduate Summa Cum Laude and expects to enter medical school this fall. The biology prize is an annual award of $500 established in 1974 in memory of Marian Spector (A.B. '38), who studied zoology under Viktor Hamburger, professor emeritus of biology, and was active in research in embryology in Hamburger's laboratory.

Matthew Alan Rieth, a senior biology major, is the recipient of the Harrison Dailey Stalker Prize. In addition to an outstanding academic record, Rieth is a student of piano and an accomplished trombonist who has been a member of the University's Wind Ensemble since 1981. He was elected to Phi Beta Kappa in his junior year and will graduate with Honors in May. He expects to enter the University of South Dakota School of Medicine in the fall. The Stalker Prize, an award of $200, was named for the late Harrison D. Stalker who was a professor of biology at WU for 40 years. The prize was endowed by his colleagues in 1982 and is given annually to an outstanding graduating senior.

Jules M. Snitzer, clinical professor in the periodontal department of the School of Dental Medicine, has been appointed chairman of the Student Loan Committee of the American Association of Periodontology.

Harriet A. Stone, assistant professor of French, served on a panel discussion of "L'annee 1674" at the North American Society for 17th-century French Literature Conference, March 29 at Louisiana State University.

Mark Weil, chairman of the Department of Art and Archaeology, has been invited to be art historian-in-residence at the American Academy in Rome for fall semester 1985.

Raymond L. Williams, associate professor of Spanish, discussed "The Theater of Mario Vargas Llosa in the Context of His Fiction" at the Southeast Conference on Foreign Languages and Literatures at the end of February. His article "Gabriel Garcia Marquez" will appear in Critical Survey of Long Fiction: Foreign Language Series, (1984) Vol. 2.

Arthur Wirth, professor of education, had an article, "Education for a Synthetic Planet: Logotherapy and Learning for Responsibility," published in a special issue of International Forum for Logotherapy (spring 1985) to celebrate the 80th birthday of Viktor Frankl.

Macias, Hegel named chairs of departments

Edward S. Macias, professor of chemistry, has been named chairman of the Department of Chemistry, and Robert E. Hegel, associate professor of Chinese language and literature, has been named chairman of the Department of Chinese and Japanese, announced Richard N. Rosett, dean of the Faculty of Arts and Sciences.

Macias and Hegel, whose appointments were effective immediately, had served as acting chairmen of their respective departments.

Macias, who was named acting chairman in July 1984, succeeds William D. Phillips, adjunct professor of chemistry and senior vice president, science and technology, at Mallinckrodt Inc. Hegel, who had served as acting chairman of the department since August 1983, succeeds J. Thomas Rimer, who now is chief of the Asian Division of the Library of Congress, Washington, D.C.

Macias has been director of the University's Summer School since 1982. He joined the chemistry department in 1970 after receiving his doctorate in nuclear chemistry from Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He received a bachelor's degree in chemistry from Colgate University in 1966. His research areas are environmental chemistry, nuclear chemistry and atomic spectroscopy.

Macias, who has written more than 65 technical articles, is the co-author of the texts Nuclear and

Robert E. Hegel

Radiochemistry and Atmospheric Aerosol: Source/Air Quality Relationships.

Among his University commitments, Macias has served as secretary of the Faculty Senate, faculty representative to the Board of Trustees and chairman of the Curriculum Committee. He is on the Faculty Advisory Board of University College.

Hegel, who specializes in Chinese narrative literature, has been published widely in the United States and Asia. His most recent work is Expressions of Self in Chinese Literature, which he co-edited with Richard C. Hessney.

Hegel is a member of the Association of Asian Studies, the Modern Language Association and the Society for the Study of Chinese Religions. Since 1980, he has been the book review editor for Chinese Literature: Essays, Articles, Reviews.

A recipient of grants and fellowships, he has received several National Defense Foreign Language Fellowships through Columbia University, two WU Faculty Research Grants and an American Council of Learned Societies Grant for Research on Chinese Civilization.

Hegel holds a doctorate in Chinese and Japanese literatures from Columbia University in New York and has taught at WU since January 1975.

Book written on WU founder

A collection of six essays on the life and character of William Greenleaf Eliot, WU's founder, recently was published by the First Unitarian Church of St. Louis on the occasion of the 150th anniversary of the church's founding.

Titled William Greenleaf Eliot: Conservative Radical, the book was written by Earl K. Holt III, minister of the First Unitarian Church of St. Louis, and is based on the 1983 Minns Lectures, which Holt delivered in St. Louis. Chancellor William H. Danforth wrote the foreword.

"The character of William Greenleaf Eliot suggests almost automatically his virtues — those traits of character that allowed a frail young minister from Boston to lead the efforts to civilize a frontier town on the Mississippi River and to create in that town enduring institutions to serve its educational, religious and social service needs," wrote Danforth.

The book contains a chapter dealing with Eliot's years as the third chancellor of the University (1872-1887) and several photographs from the WU archives collection.

"The William Greenleaf Eliot papers were used extensively in this project," said Beryl Manne, WU archivist. Of the essay collection, Manne said, "It is a worthy effort and certainly adds to a further understanding of Eliot as minister, educator and philanthropist."

An inscribed copy of the book, a gift of the author, is housed in Special Collections, level five, Olin Library. The book is for sale in the WU bookstore.

Senior receives British scholarship

The British Embassy has announced the award of a scholarship to Frances S. Kirkpatrick, a senior in literature and history.

The Marshall Scholarship, named after the late General George C. Marshall, who also was secretary of state, was established in 1953 as an expression of British appreciation for the generous help given to Europe under the U.S. Marshall Plan.

The scholarship includes a minimum of two years' study, all expenses paid, at a British university, in
